The Secret's Out: Cameroon Has Oil

nt Cautious President Abidjo Determined to Avoid 'Boom Mentality'

Cameroon and are expected to begin produc-tion shortly. A French firm, Total, is also in-volved in exploration:

Cameroon's share from its oil production last year is estimated by businessmen to have been about $350 million. Of that amount, $128 mil-fion showed up on Cameroon's most recent budget. Where did the rest go? "I would like to think," a Western economics officer said, "that it is being set aside for some good use in the future. I believe most of it is."

Because good news generally makes for cheerful official press releases. Cameroon's cir-cumspection over publicizing its oil boom seems curious at first. However, the govern-ment's caution is admired by observers.

"They seem determined in Cameroon to avoid that boom mentality that causes so much trouble for Nigeria," one said. "President Ahid-jo wants to take it slowly, and that is probably a very wise course."

The urban growth rate of Cameroon, population 7 million, was 6 percent last year, as word seemed to radiate from the commercial capital, Douala, that there was money around and jobs to be had.

Overcrowding

With that growth has come overcrowding and an inflation rate that has been running between 15 and 20 percent. Trumpeting the news of oil production and new discoveries could only exacerbate these problems.

Caution has been a hailmark of Mr. Ahidjo's government. He is described by admiring diplo-mats as being decidedly unflashy, but steady and hard-working. In African politics, Mr. Ahidjo is known as a compromiser. He is now serving his fifth five-year term as president, and his style has apparently suited the country well.

Court Case Expected Against Bani-Sadr

U.S. Ambassador Hume Horan said. "Internally, this country has as many tribal, religious and ethnic divisions as any country in Africa. But here it is, getting along just fine.

"The Cameroonians don't make a lot of speeches, they don't toot their own horn. Their food production is OK, they're having a little bit of an oil boom. If there were more Cam-eroons in the world, our foreign policy would be much easier."

Tough President

Mr. Ahidjo, 57, has led his country since its independence from France in 1960 and has proved that he can be tough when necessary.

In the 1960s, Cameroon was the scene of bloody guerrilla activity, and Mr. Ahidjo re-sponded with force. The remaining guerrillas were said to have been rounded up in 1972. The country remains security-conscious, and West-ern diplomats estimate that about 300 political prisoners are being held in Cameroomian jails.

At the same time, Mr. Ahidjo is apparently forgiving of his political opponents, often bringing them into the government. And, ac-cording to a diplomat, if someone in the gov-ernment falls out of favor, he is usually eased out over a period of time.

That is not to say the country does not have problems. Businessmen complain about the growing level of corruption. Some citizens say the civil service is shot through with favoritism.

There are also some who wonder — quiety — what the president is doing building a $150-million palace on a hilltop in Yaounde, the cap-ital. University students have become restive in the last year or two, and more and more graduates are complaining that their education is of little value in slow-moving Cameroon. But for now, there seems little reason to ex-pect any sudden changes, not from a president who values deliberation and a reliance on the old ways.

British Tory MP Defects To New Social Democrats

By Leonard Downie Ir.

Washington Post Service LONDON - In a dramatic demonstration of growing political opposition to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's barsh economic policies. a member of Parliament quit the governing Conservative Party Monday in the middle of a debate on its unpopular tax-raising hudget.

Christopher Brocklebank-Fowler, a Conservative member of Parliament since 1970, declared in a crowded House of Commons that he was joining the new Social Democratic Party, in the center of the British political spectrum. He then walked down from the government benches and crossed the dividing aisle to sit on one of the facing opposition benches with the 12 Social Democrats. They had only recently defected from Labor, the largest opposition party, which has turned sharply to the left while Mrs. Thatcher has moved the Conservatives to the right.

No other Conservative member of Parliament is expected to follow Mr. Brocklebank-Fowler soon. Buthis more gave a symbolic boost to the fledgling Social Democratic Party. According to public opinion polls, it is equally attractive to both Labor and Conservative voters as an alternative, in alliance with the existing Liberal Party, to Labor's more militant Socialism and Mrs. Thatcher's survival-ofthe-fittest free market determination.

Mr. Brocklebank-Fowler's strong criticism of Mrs. Thatcher's government is shared by a sizable minority of Conservative members of Parliament, including a number of Mrs. Thatcher's Cahinet ministers. Some of them also have publiely expressed their dissent, while others have privately made it clear to fellow politicians and newsmen.

Pressing for Action

But they have indicated they will stay in the government to try to change its policies. Many of them are pressing for action by Mrs. Thatcher before the end of the year to ease the squeeze on private industry during Britain's worst recession in a half century. They want further reductions in interest rates and taxes on husiness, some form of relief from high energy cosis, and innovative forms of private and government investment in capital improvements such as roads, railroads, sewers and (Continued on Page 2, Col. 2)

Some points in this approach are congenial to other participants to the Mexico session. The oil exporters, who hold a key to the ecooomic outlook, also seem convinced that extensive public debates are fruitless.

Many European leaders, who acknowledge privately that the UN-sponsored global negotiations have bogged down, share many of Washington's views.

A European Sampling

Io Britain, Margaret Thatcher's government insists it will oo longer listen to demands for assistance based on a colonial past. France has always preferred helping its clients rather than working through international organizations, and nearly 85 percent of French assistance is hilateral. West Germany prefers to direct its Deutsche-mark diplomacy to re-gions it considers vital to European security.

But the Europeans are nervous about seeing the Reagan policies pushed too hard, too fast.

The Mexico summit meeting, several European diplomats said, should be an ideal format for Mr. Reagan to explain his ideas, see other leaders' reactions at first hand and perhaps agree to some mutual adjustments.

approach to the Mexico meeting. Mr. Carter felt that if the sum-mit session was held, it should achieve at least ooe tangihle result. His advisers seized oo the idea of beginning at the summit a new en-ergy facility under the World Bank a project the Reagan administration has just abandoned.

sisted that the meeting avoid set-ting any international commitments, that it be restricted to an exchange of views and an attempt to elear the air for a fresh start.

Europeans have gone along with this approach, partly out of con-viction that it offers the best chance of success and partly to insure U.S. participation. Israel Viewed as 7th In World Arms Sales

By Drew Middleton

New York Times Service NEW YORK - The rapidly expanding Israeli arms industry now ranks seventh among the world's exporters of weapons and defenserelated equipment with sales for the year ending April 1 amounting to about $1.3 hillion, a 40 percent increase over those of the previous year, according to a British military publication.

The publication Defense At-tache suggests that one reason for the success of Israel's exports is "combat proven." Another, the London publication said, is a high technological standard.

Superpowers' Exports

American and other analysts believe that the expansion of the Israeli arms industry has a significant influence on the balance of power in the Middle East. No potential Arab adversary has a comparable arms production capacity; in a war, they must rely on support from the United States. France, Britain or the Soviet Union. The two superpowers dominate arms exports. Although many Soviet deals are secret, it is estimated that the United States and the Soviet Union are responsible for 75 percent of the trade. Israel's arms industry, analysts said, would give it an initial advan-tage in another Arab-Israeli war. But they added that modern warfare's appetite for military re-sources is so great, as the 1973 conflict demonstrated, that in a war lasting more than three weeks Isra-el would prohably have to turn to the United States for resupply. This would be especially true, they suggested, for precision-guided missiles to be used against tanks and planes. Israel, the sources added, is not self-sufficient in weaponry. The air force depends on the American F-15 fighter for defense of its air space. Israel's uneasiness over the American agreement to furnisb long-range fuel tanks and air-to-air missiles for Saudi Arabia's F-15s reflects a fear that the planes would erode Israel's presumed command of the sir. The Kfir C-2 fighter-bomber, the second version of the Kfir, is the weapon system that has at tracted the most attention from foreign huyers. Mexico, Bolivia and Colombia are reported to be interested in it. The basic airframe is similar to that of the French Mirage V, and the engine is made by General Electric.

A new fighter, the Lavie, is to enter service at the end of this decade to replace 80 Kfirs and 200 American A-4 Skyhawks now flying. But Israel's economic difficulties have made it difficult to pay for the plane. Development of the Lavie, including four prototypes, would cost about $900 million in 1980 dollars. An additional expense would be construction of a plant to produce an American en-gine for the new aircraft. The most versatile and innovathe about versation and an unit of the weapon produced by Israel is the Merkava, or Charlot, tank, which in special circumstances would go into action carrying five infantrymen. But the Merkava has been built for Israel's special envi-ronmental and geographic require-ments, and the tank is probably the weapon least attractive to foreign buyers. Another factor is that every major Western military power is already deep into production of a new tank and is seeking foreign purchasers.

A Classic Hostage Dilemma

The 13-day hijacking and hostage-taking stances, it, too, seems to have made the right ordeal just played out in Pakistan, Afghanistan and Syria was unique like every act of iterrorism. The similarities between this and other incidents are more striking than the differences, hut because there are always differences, no programmed response is possible. There is also the element of unpredictability in all such fast-moving situations. No one could have foreseen that this particular drama would end with both the hijackers and the released Pakistani prisoners under guard in Damascus hotel rooms.

Pag

But the positive outcome does not prove that Pakistan was right to release the prisoners. ff Lihya had given haven to the hijackers as expected, it would have provided another precedent for the effectivness of international terror as a political tool. And if Pakistan had not given in, chances are the hijackers would have carried out their threat to hlow up the plane with more than a hundred passengers and crew members on board. ft was the classic dilemma of all hostage situations: Should innocent lives be sacrificed to prevent future acts of terrorism?

The answer, as unsatisfactory as it may seem, is sometimes yes and sometimes no. 'The United States was right, for example, not to back down from its unwillingness to compromise national honor to gain the release of its diplomatic hostages in Iran. If it had done so, U.S. vulnerability to hlackmail would have been clearly demonstrated. The potential consequences are not pleasant to contemplate. Besides, the diplomats were in less clear danger of losing their lives. In the case of Pakistan, the question was different. Should it release its own political prisoners to save the lives of innocent people, many of whom were not Pakistani? Given the circumchoice.

There is another question, though, which is not so easily answered. Was there a Soviet connection? There is some evidence that the hijackers were supplied with additional arms by the Soviet-backed government in Kahul. There have also been reports of links between the hijackers and the PLO as well as the master terrorist, Carlos, Both the PLO and Carlos are tied to an international terrorist network in which the Soviet Union plays a central role. In apparent contradiction of any theory of Soviet involvement, though, is the refusal of the Soviet-hacked Libyan regime to accept the hijackers.

Pakistan has left it up to Syria to decide what to do with both the prisoners and the hijackers. The former, presumably, will be returned to the jail whence they came. But the Syrians are purported to have given the hijackers "certain assurances" about their future. Is Syria bound to bonor those assurances? Unlike the United States hargain with Iran, which involved the guarantees and good offices of Algeria and several other countries, this deal would seem to have no such international implications. There may be political implications, of course, especially if there is a Soviet connection. Syria is unlikely to send the hijackers hack to Pakistan if the Soviet Union is opposed to it.

In princple, though, a deal of this kind, made under the threat of murder, has neither moral nor legal standing. Irrespective of one's opinion about who is right and who is wrong in the political hattle between Pakistani Prime Minister Zia ul-Haq and the followers of the late Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, terrorists should he brought to justice.

It was disquieting to learn the other day that a CIA-led task force has proposed removing many current restraints on collecting information on Americans -- on Americans, moreover, neither accused nor suspected of committing any crime. But the disclosure, in a leak, did seem to have a positive effect. The agency's deputy director, Adm. Bohby Ray Inman, promptly held a press conference and disavowed key elements of the draft proposal. He then reaffirmed his opposition before the Senate Intelligence Committee, reassuring the oversight group that "the job of the CIA is abroad" and describing the leaked report as merely a "third-level working staff paper."

Whatever its "level," the draft appears to have originated among political and intelligence circles either unfamiliar or unhappy with the process of executive-congressionalagency consultation by which intelligence guidelines have been fashioned through the Ford and Carter years. Adm. Inman has that n and that is presumably why he reacted to the leak as he did. Fortunately, Adm. Inman left no doubt of his resistance, and of the resistance of CIA. Director William J. Casey, to the proposals in the staff paper. The admiral had no hesitation in arguing that certain constraints governing the actions of intelligence agents in this field might have to be reviewed in order to deal with specific terrorist threats. But he put the CIA's "old boys," and others so minded, on notice that he does not support an attempt to restore the good old days of widespread surveillance, surreptitious entries, infiltration of suspected organizations and other covert operations - at least not in the United States. He thought it would not he "likely" that the final draft of any new executive order governing CIA behavior would sanction such practices. The admiral displayed admirable and, one hopes, contagious sensitivity to civil liberties concerns. At the same time, he complained that the draft report had been leaked by someone from the "cottage industry" of intelligence agency oversight that has "grown up" in Congress and in the Justice Department. One can understand how an intelligence official might feel about leaks. Yet Adm. Inman and other thoughtful professionals have reason to know that 'in recent years they have often heen hetter served by "cottage industry" overseers than by some of the CIA's own complacent and nostalgic hands. The wish-list draft that circulated last week suggests that some people have not properly absorbed the experience of the past decade.

fn foct, most Americans do appear to agree that the intelligence agencies should be strengthened. The relevant question is how. The leaked proposal represents an unfound-ed claim to set the CIA up in the field of domestic counterintelligence. It raises the specter of the 1980s' anti-terrorist equivalent of "Operation Chaos," the CIA's justly criticized compilation of files on 300,000 allegedly anti-war persons and organizations during the Vietnam War. Only recently, furthermore, FBI Director William Webster assured Congress that his agency did not need to have the existing FBf guidelines relaxed in order to deal effectively with terrorists and foreign agents in this country.

El Salvador: Slender Chance

Just conceivably there may eventually, before the year is out, be a possibility of negotiation. ft is a slender chance now, for both government and opposition will have to repair the schisms in their own ranks first. But somehow - through Panama, through West Germany - it should be pursued. All this suggests that the international ructions of the past few weeks have been slightly off the point. A second Vietnam? Not likely, and in any case inherently improbable. A threat to detente? Not on the cards, since the Russians have shown no desire to be involved.

But while developments in El Salvador have clearly not worried the Russians, President Reagan's bandling of them has significantly alarmed U.S. friends and allies.

What, for example, will happen when there is a crisis that more directly affects the interests of Western Europe? Fortunately, perhaps, the present crisis bas been postponed. There is time for reflection, for consideration of the situation on the ground. May it be used by the new U.S. administration to eschew the rhetoric of the hustings and to examine more critically the fragile and complex nature of the world we all share.

British Labor Group in the assem-bly, last month called on British members to boycott an official trip to Sierra Leone as a protest against inflated expense allowances. Eight British Conservatives have also called for a ban on all European parliamentary travel abroad until cuts in the cost and size of delegations had been made. Mr. Pannella's campaign, which he says he will follow up through advertisements in newspapers published in EEC countries, and paid for out of his $100,000 annual sal-ary, has provoked a flurry of activ-

Mr. Panella has also accused the Parliament's executive bureau and group leaders of monopolizing power and stifling democracy. Parliamentary delegations that have recently visited Sierra Leone, Colombia, and Australia have called news conferences to explain their spending, and a delegation leaving for Southeast Asia next month has cut down its itinerary.

Delegations themselves argue that their size and expense are justified by the importance of their work.

Mr. Panella has singled out the Parliament's relations with the 60 African, Caribbean and Pacific nations linked in a trade and aid agreement with the EEC. He noted that when parliamentary meetings with nations from these three areas were beld in Linxembourg or Brus-sels, attendance was slight, but that parliamentarians thronged to attend meetings in African, Carib-bean and Pacific, nations.

Turkey's Leaders Regiment Daily Life

By Marvine Howe New York Times Service ANKARA — Turkey's military men, who assumed power last September to restore law and order, are trying to bring stricter disci-pline into Turkish life.

The move for more regimenta-tion is directed first at Turkey's huge, lax administration and the unruly schools, but it threatens to spill over into the press and other sectors.

In their drive against politics and politicians, the military rulers have brought many retired officers into the administration and public enterprises, replacing political hu-reaucrais as ministers, undersecretaries, deputy undersecretaries and directors general as well as governors and mayors. Military personnel are also being introduced in a watchdog capacity in the ministries.

Press Code Begun

The official gazette recently announced the appointment of 16 new directors general, including a retired full general, two lieutenant generals, three major generals and two colonels. Among the retired generals called to new tasks are Necati Ozkaner, the new director general of information; Macit Akmerals called to new tasks are man, director general of the state radio and television company, and Cevdet Tanyelv, director general of Anatolia, the state news agency. A director general ranks third in the Turkish administrative hierarchy after the Cabinet minister and undersecretary.

In their efforts to regiment the public services, the authorities have announced plans to establish a state information office; ministries are oo longer authorized to give any information directly to the press, and work had begun on a press morality code.

In January, Premier Bulent Ulusu's office warned all ministries and public companies not to give out any news "that could be contrary to the interests of the

Turkey's relatively independent press has uneasily watched these disciplinary measures, which suggest a move toward tightening of official news sources. Last month, Mr. Ulusu, a retired admiral, issued wide-ranging in-structions to all ministries, general directorates and universities designed to save energy and cut administrative costs, such as specifying the use of 25-watt bulbs for halls, corridors and toilets; the use of fuels other than oil whenever able and restrictions on the use of official vehicles.

It was also ordered that the consumption of paper and other writ-ing materials should be kept to a minimum, with cheap, standard-sized paper used and with no empty spaces left on the page. Carboo copies will be preferred to photo-copies. To reduce medical ex-penses in official services, it was recommended that the least expen-sive medicines be used and only in the required amounts and that a ceiling be set on costs of medical oceds such as dentures and eye-and directors general will have telephones in their offices. In line with moves to introduce a new work ethic, the director general of press and information forbid employees to look out of the windows on the main street.

The Interior Ministry recently harred the opening of any new colfeehouses and ordering tight control of the licenses of existing coffeehouses.

It is also clear that Turks will continue to drink tea in their coffeehouses, contrary to rumors that the new regime would bring back Turkish coffee, which has not been imported since 1978, when the economic crisis intensified. A senior government official srid that if the ban on importing coffee was end-ed, Turks might think all their economic problems were over, and they are oot.

HAMBURG - "Germany had it better under Hitler." said 18 percent of West German voters according to a survey ordered by the Bonn government and published in part by Spiegel magazine Monday.

The magazine said that every seventh West German citizen has an extreme rightist viewpoint and almost half of this group favors the use of force, according to the survey ordered in 1979 and allegedly kept under wraps since it was finished last year.

Spiegel said the report was compiled by the Munich-based Sinus Institute and hased on the evaluation of rightist literature and the questioning of 6.968 eligible voters. "The alarming result: 'A total of 13 percent of the voters (about

"Ao above-average number of rightist radicals come from vil-lages of between 2,000 and 5,000 inhabitants, from small towns and the rural areas around hig cities. More often than not they have no professional training," the report said. The clear majority of rightists are over 50 years old, those who experienced the Hitler dictatorship, the report said. "Only 4 per-cent of those who can be grouped into rightist extremism are 18-21 vears old."

Russians Called Large Consumers of 'Moonshine'

DURHAM, N.C. - In the Sovier Union, as in the United States, some of the best homebrewed alcohol comes from the hinterlands of Georgia, where rural residents are as proud of their moonshine as they are of having sent one of their homegrown sons to Moscow to lead the nation.

According to Dr. Vladimir G. Treml, a Russian-born economist at Duke University who specializes in alcoholism in the Soviet Union. the hootlegged Georgian hrandy called chacha is every bit as prized in the Caucasus as is the corn li-quor called "white lightning" in the southern Appalachians.

However, in an article in the Journal of Alcohol Studies, Tremi, who heads Duke's Slavic studies program, suggests that, rather than chacha, it is the vodka-like samogon, or home brew, sometimes dis-tilled to well over 100 proof, that is the most widely used moonshine in the Soviet Union, accounting for 20 to 33 percent of the country's considerable consumption of liquor.

Aid From Cuba

As in the hills and hollows of the U.S. South, moonshine production in the Soviet Union is a major consumer of sugar. In recent years, Tremi says, the abundance of cheap sugar from Cuha has played a key role in increasing the supplies and quality of samogon. One example is a popular ditty, which takes note of the practice of deter-mining the proof of samogon hy

They arrived by air at Orly Nov. 24, 1979 - two females and one male of each of three breeds - the Mei-Shan, an all-black animal with four white feet, a white shout and folds of flesh around its head which make it look like a pintsized elephant; use Jia-Ning, which is all black, and the Jin-Hoa, black with a white band around its middle - a smaller, hairier bog look-purebred pigs excellent. The Chi-nese hogs at Magneraud give birth to litters of 16 to 20.

The females are very precocious sexually, ready to be bred at roughly balf the age of American or European breeds — at 90 to 110 days rather than 200. The females are ready to be bred as soon as they are weaned.

Their rate of growth is excep-tional. NEW YORK - The Dow Jones industrial average broke the 1,000 mark Monday as prices on the New York Stock Exchange pushed sharply higher in active trading.

The run-up was helped by a continuing downward trend in interest rates and a rash of short-covering. The Dow — which lost 4.05 points on Friday — gained 17.02 points to close at 1,002,79, its first close over 1,000 since Jan. 6. Advances led declines by 929 10 523 as turnover slowed to 50 million shares from the 68.3 million traded Friday. Chase Manhattan and First Na-tional Bank of Chicago cut their prime rates to 17% percent from 18 percent, following Chemical Bank's reduction to 17/2 last Fri-day. The Bank of New York cut its broker loan rate to 16 percent from 16% percent, the first major bank at that level. On Jan. 7, the Dow dropped 24 points on a recommendation by market adviser Joseph Granville to sell all positions and even sell short. In a short sale, an investor sells borrowed stock in the hope of profiting from a lower price later. Analysis said some who followed Mr. Granville's recommendation were caught in a short squeeze

The empty lots point up an investment contraction caused by the country's toughest postwar economic crisis.

There's been no orthodox financial policy, nothing like an incomes policy, and the budget has gotten totally out of hand," said a top economist at a major Brussels bank, commenting on the government's un-successful attempts to set the economy straight.

We've had crises in steel, textiles and mechanical engineering," he said. "Office building has slowed since 1975, and now it's homes, with building costs up and mortgages at 14 percent."

Unemployment to Keep Growing

In a recent report published by Belgian newspa-pers, the national bank forecast that the economy would shrink this year by 1.7 percent, business in-vestment would drop 3.8 percent and the current-account deficit would balloon to $6.8 billion.

The report projected that unemployment would swell by 100,000 to reach 477,000, or about 10 per-

Japan Machine Tools

Make Export Surge

United Press Intern TOKYO - Japanese exports of machine tools to the United States and the major European markets jumped sharply in 1980, the Japan Machine Tool Builders' Association reported Monday. U.S. imports were 106.8 billion yen ($514 million) on a customs clearance basis, up 51 percent from 1979.

Exports to France went up 230.5 percent to 6.6 billion yen and to Beignum by 218.5 percent to 7.8 billion yen. West Germany, the second largest market, accounted for 22.5 billion yen, a 74.8-percent increase, and Britam's Japanese imports were up 59 percent to 14.6 billion yen.

Burns as Armchair Quarterback: U.S. Must Go 'Beyond Stockman'

By William H. Jones Washington Post Service WASHINGTON - When Arthur F. Burns was teaching eco-nomics at Columbia University and running the National Bureau of Economic Research, he found time in a very crowded schedule for such tasks as sitting down with a high school student who had a profile assignment to complete. In later years, as chairman of President Eisenhower's Council of Economic Advisers, counselor to President Nixon and Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board. Mr. Burns applied his knowledge of business cycles to the real world, for many people a painful process. Since the mid-1950s, he has had little time for anything but very se-rious work, and his record of using intellectual power to make an im-pact on the art of government will be properly dissected and assessed properly dissected and assessed by future economic historians.

But he was pessimis-tic about the likelihood of success in currency markets. Thus, Belfor the administration's prescrip-tions, mainly because they imply gians have not felt the brunt of price increases for such imports as French cheese and Japanese televian ability to manage growth that overnment may not have, Economists say that, in effect, Belgian industry has been footing the bill, first by paying the differ-ence in currency fluctuations to the oil-producing countries, then Mr. Burns called Budget Direc-budget overhaul an "extraordinary intellectual achievement." Mr. Burns described the Reagan approach as gradualist, one that promises to huild future economic stability from incremental reductions in the rate of inflation growth and gradual reductions of federal deficits.

Noting that he regarded himself as a gradualist while at the Federal Reserve, Mr. Burns said: "I arn rethinking my mistakes ... If we lived in a world where economic developments took place smoothly ... perhaps you could stay with a gradualist approach and achieve results.

But plans now in effect to re-duce (ederal deficits gradually and to cut money supply expansion by less than one percent a year "could easily be swamped by external de-velopments." Mr. Burns stated. Mr. Burns said. The precision required by the administration program, not only for Federal Reserve money managers hut also for government officials, is impossible to achieve in an era where money marke) mutual funds have soared to $100 hillion in assets and other financial innovations are distorting normal measures of the economy.

As a result, the "Fed has lost its moorings" in terms of being able to monitor the availability of money in the economy. In a broader way, Mr. Bu said, the administration is "co ing very heavily" on a chang expectations, "a growing believe the American people that the ministration has a policy it stay with," But a reduction in jected federal hudget deficits f $55 hillion in one year to $45 lion the next is "really stan still," once errors in estimation that level are considered, he sta

"shock therapy," as the way to end inflation. He said he would go "beyond Stockman" and cut the federal hudget even more than has been proposed, stop the money supply from growing at all and forget about cutting taxes now "and be unhappy a little longer." A major problem that has beset U.S. governments in recent years, in the view of Mr. Burns, has been carrying too far the theories of English economist John Maynard Keynes in trying to fine tube : huge economic machine. Mr. Reagan "has shown courage and persistence to make good on cam-paign promises" hy developing a program to cure inflation and re-duce government's role in the economy, but the solutions propose a course of developments outside of historical experience.

Financing Problems Stall iberia-Europe Gas Deal

The Associated Press BONN — Financial problems e stalling a 5,500-kilometer ,400-mile) pipeline project to ing Siberian natural gas to Westa Europe.

The Reagan administration has pressed concern that the deal build increase West European engy dependence on the Soviet Unn, which would supply about 40 llion cubic meters of gas a year France, Italy, Austria, the etherlands, Belgium, Luxem-: ang and possibly Switzerland,

But money, not politics, may be a main stumbling block. A con-tium of West German banks at is to provide about 10 billion suische marks in credits has yet agree on interest rates.

"A banking source reported "to-deadlock" after representatives a score of West German banks == :: t in Frankfurt Thursday to dis-

ss interest structures. 4. . 59

The banks and Soviet negotiators earlier this year announced agreement in principle on loans to huild the pipeline. The West German press said in January that the banks would collect interest of 7.75 percent, plus 2 percent from special price arrangements for the gas and for pipes to be supplied by West German firms.

Since then, West German interest rates have increased sharply in response to foreign pressure on the mark. The special Lombard rate for institutional borrowers was 12 percent on Monday, up from less than 10 percent earlier this year, "If we accepted the previously envisaged terms, we actually would lose money," a banking source was quoted as saying. The duration of the loans was another issue yet to be resolved, informants said. Sources said U.S. objections strengthened the position of consortium members who have been cool to the deal.

FROM OUR PROFITABLE BASE IN THE NETHERLANDS WE RANGE UNUSUALLY FAR.

Ennia is one of the largest and fastest growing insurance groups in The Netherlands, with assets exceeding DfL 10 billion.

AME

Un. 10 billion. The major proportion of our revenue is generated at home but our international business is growing rapidly, and already forms 23% of the total. We have offices, subsidiaries and affiliates in the United States, the Middle East, the Caribbean, Surinam, Belgium and the United Kingdom. We have also acquired a majority interest in the insurance company Galicia S.A. with branches throughout Spain.

Internationally we operate in three main areas: life assurance (55%), general and re-insurance (36%), and related sectors including mortgages, property development, even holiday centres (9%).

Our objective is sustained, balanced growth at home and abroad and we have established a good record in this to the benefit of shareholders and policyholders. If you have an interest in the insurance industry, or simply in the success of a growing international business with an increasing reputation for balanced growth — you should have information on file about Ennia. Please contact us for a copy of our corporate brochure. Ennia N.Y., Churchillplein 1, The Hague, The Netherlands. Tel: (070) 727272. Telex: 31657.

Chicago Subway Driver Chooses

Wrong Bum as Target for Theft United Press Internat

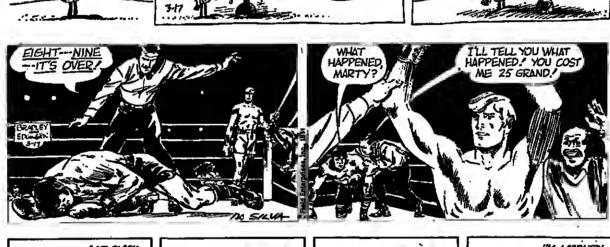

. CHICAGO --- A Chicago Transit Authority motorman made a crucial mistake, police say, when he stopped his traio to steal $11 from a wino sleeping on a subway platform. The driver chose a police decoy. Edward Anderson, 24, was charged with felony theft. He was suspend-ed from his job Sunday pending an investigation, said a transit authority spokesman.

Police said Mr. Anderson stopped his train at midnight Saturday and stole $11 from a wallet in the pocket of Patrolman William Kowalski, who was slumped against a pillar on the platform. Mr. Kowalski's partner, Patrolman Edward Utterback, who witnessed the iocident, said Mr. Anderson stole the money when he nudged Mr. Kowalski as if to rouse him.

BRIDGE.

ONE can expect drama, especially in a duplicate game, when the partnership with most of the highcard strength is vulnerable and the opponents are not. If both sides have a good fit, a profitable save is likely to be available, and both sides will have to judge exactly how far to go. An example is the diagramed deal, reported by the East player who had occasion to admire the defensive skill of his partner. At any other vulnerability, East-West would no doubt have landed in four spades or four hearts and made il tricks. But as it was, North-South were able to make their presence felt. After East had opened one spade and West had responded two clubs. North were used a take-out double He had ventured a take-out double. when East showed bearts. South made an imaginative jump to five dia-monds. He felt sure his opponents could make four spades, and his bid stood to gain in two different ways. He might push his opponents to the five-level and defeat them. Or he might be doubled and escape with down three, losing 500 points. If West had made a forcing pass, the contract would have been five hearts or five spades. But West chose to double, gambling that she could collect six tricks in defense. Looking at the four hands, it might seem that this judgment was wrong, for South appears to have just five losers, two in spades and one in each of the other suits.

But West proceeded to defend in a manner that vindicated her double. She led the spade ten, and East cap-tured dummy's jack with the queen and shifted to the club king. West lot overtook with the ace and made a key play by cashing the heart ace. There she reverted to spades, and East work with the ace and played a third roundword of the suit. There was now no way to prevent the defenders from taking two trumpting tricks. Whether or not South ruffed to West could win and lead a club [71] bringing East's diamond jack interact

Delayed Opener

The start of the season was delayed because of a winterlong po-litical battle between the world sanctioning body, FISA, and the Formula One Constructors Associ-

The dispute was ended earlier this month with a compromise that left FISA in charge of rules and internal workings, and FOCA with control of the financial and merchandising aspects of the sport. FISA immediately banned the side skirts, which were an integral part of the ground effects aerody-namics of the past few years. That action slowed the cars down by a few miles an hour in Sunday's TROP

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) --Race stewards Sunday levied their second $2,000 fine of the weekend for dangerous conduct on the driving course.

John Watson of Northern Ire-land and Team McLaren drew the latest fine. When Watson's McLaren M30 stalled on the course the driver walked to the pits, then brought his crew back to the car, cutting across the track against the orders of the clerk of the course. A $2,000 fine was levied against Jean-Pierre Jarier and his Talbot-Ligier team for a similar offense during Friday's qualifying period.

PHOENIX, Ariz. - It's only a spring training exhibition game, but for the first time in major league history, two black managers were to exchange lineup cards Monday when Frank Robinson of the San Francisco Giants and Maury Wills of the Seattle Mariners met with the umpires at home plate. If this was a foomote to baseball's belated sociological progress, it was also a tribute to the two managers' patience and persistence.

"I dida't think I was going to get another chance." said Robinson. once the Cleveland Indians' manager. "I figured the word was out. Hands off. He had his shot."

For more than three years after the Indians dismissed basehall's tance of where he was born (Brooklyn), a nice walk from where he lived (Gramercy Park) and a stone's throw from where most of his work first appeared (The New Yorker, on 43d Street). The manuscripts indicate that Perelman was as fastidious a craftsman in his prose as he was in his personal manner and dress. Where changes were made in the typescripts, be rolled the page back into the typewriter to make the interlineations. Where whole paragraphs were revised, he pasted in the oew material.

Travel Notes

Even his notes are funny, but also factual. He went to the trouble of typing up his handwritten ootes. When he went to the Far East in 1947 with his longtime friend Al Hirschfeld, the artist, he set down his observations in a ringed pocket notebook. The notes show the genesis of his travel pieces, later collected in Westward Ha!":

"Chinwangtao - Al and l de-cide to stretch legs and descend, start for town — we are told it is under martial law, that trains have been blown up, that Com-munists are 5 miles away, that latter have committed fantastic outrages. But we are planning to go to Peiping via Tienstsin and want to see about r.r. arrangements. Dark predictions from tight-lips about trouble. The rick-shaw boy and his attractive offers - houses of tolerance - suggests aberrations even unlisted by Ellis and Stekel." Returning home to the United States, he notes: "Our aplomb as we came through Customs, Al takes out lingerie he has stow in pocket and wipes his forehead."

The toughest comments in the papers concern his play "The acty Part," which opened during the 1962 newspaper strike, had a short run and later was revived at the American Place Theater. There are nine versions of the play bere. In a sharply worded memorandum to his produclong time ago that of all the

The typescripts and hand-wrought revisions include a number of pieces that later turned up in his books and versions of two plays.

Outrageous phrases are encountered in these pages that are quintessential Perelman: "Monet makes the world go round . . . A hepcat may look at a king ... Methinks he doth protein too much ... De gustibus ain't what dey used to be ... Around the bend in 80 days . . To err is human, to forgive supme.

And there are names here that Dickens would have envied: Urban Sprawl, architect; Hawfinch & Mealworm, tailors; Howells & Imprecations, attorneys; Whitelipped & Trembling, brokers, Chalky Aftertaste & His Musical Poltroons, a ragtime band; Lothar Perfidiasch, the Hungarian playwright and plagiarist; and the French grammarian Moe Juste.

The contents of Pereiman's magical suitcase are still being sorted out. This summer Dr Szladits will mount an exhibition on satire in the Berg Collection's public room. A whole row of Perelman's writings will be in-cluded in the display.

The collection acquired by the Berg contains most of the papers Perelman saved, according to his longtime lawyer, executor and friend James H. Mathias, After giving up his country home in Bucks County, Perelman decided to travel light. As Perelman put it: "Happiness is a paper bag of possessions in a room at the Mills Hotel." INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE, TUESDAY, MARCH 17, 1981

"I feel that throughout various rewrites and because of many factors - actors' inability to immediately interpret a line properly, pressure, impatience, etc. - a number of valuable (and to me, witty) touches have been lost I think that a somewhat tighter rein should now be imposed on actors' proclivity to get aughs at whatever expense." The same memorandum adds: "I am convinced that, broadly speaking, the audience must accept the piece on my own terms; that it is fatal to truckle to what one conceives to be popular taste, since it is unpredictable; that now, having finished with provincial and dull-witted audiences, we put our best foot forward with the metropolitan one; and that we try to be as adult with the New York critics as they expect me to be." Hollywood and Broadway - rich sources for so much of his satire — get their comeuppance again and again. On Hollywood: "The voice that came over the wire was full of grovel and Hollywood subjunctives. ft was a voice trained to cut through the din of nightchubs and theater rehearsals, a flexible instrument that could shift from adulation to abuse in a single syllable, ingratiating yet peremptory, a rich syrup of unc-tion and specious authority." On Broadway: "Though oot constitutionally averse to the crackle of greenbacks, f learned a
